- Higher education professionals
- Supervisors in educational settings
- Trainers in corporate and nonprofit contexts

The audience will leave with:

- Participants will learn to maximize the benefits of transformative learning to support those people they train and/or supervise as they experience a wide range of challenges.

Session Overview

Exhilarating, heart breaking, motivating--- The message of this keynote is embedded in Dr. Kathy King's journey of chronic pain since 2004. While working as a professor, speaker, and prolific author she continues to overcome debilitating spinal illness and surgeries. This resilient scholar/speaker's life illustrates the many caveats and twists a professional journey may take, and how it serves as a metaphor for our lives in the 21st century. Dr. King's presence and message never fails to inspire participants in what just one person is capable of doing.

Dr King's transformative learning research provides insight into how adults successfully overcome challenges in their lives. From physical, to social, family or financial barriers, there are common stages people experience as they decide how to navigate them. Transformative learning theory offers a different paradigm for understanding these experiences and potential support solutions.

In this keynote, participants will not only learn about the theory, but also gain new strategies for working with and understanding of those people they train and/or supervise through adult learning examples. Attendees will develop plans to incorporate critical principles and strategies from the session into their work responsibilities. Finally, participants will learn how to leverage the benefits offered by transformative learning as they work with their reports.
